

WAS IT A FAR TRIAL?

The Verdict in the Powers Case Conservatively Considered By a Republican Paper.

Hartford, Conn., Thursday.

It is an unexpected verdict. The Kentuckians who listened to it in the Georgetown Courtroom showed their surprise in their faces, we hear. The prevalent impression had been that the jury would report a disagreement. Is it a just verdict? Was Powers an accessory to the murder of William Goebel? Did he personally procure the firing of the fatal shot, or have a knowledge that it was to be fired? We don't know, and we don't believe the jurors know. Undoubtedly Taylor and Powers and the other Republicans in possession of the state offices at the time the murder was committed did an imprudent, ill-advised thing when they brought the armed mountaineers to the scene. It is just as certain that there are large excuses to be made for their error. They knew that Goebel, who had obtained his nomination by fraud and violence, would stick at nothing in the execution of his purpose to possess himself of the Governorship and the whole machinery of state administration. They were assailed by absolute unscrupulousness, with violence (masquerading under the forms of law) behind it. We suppose that one of the mountaineers—deliberately or impulsively; sober or drunk—fired the shot that killed Goebel. We do not think it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt—or proved at all—that Powers planned for or conspired in the crime. We have no doubt that perjury had an innings on the Georgetown witness stand, and that offer of $100,000 for convicting testimony—taken in connection with the antecedent history and the Courtroom showing of the state's evidence—creates a presumption as to the side on which the bulk of the perjury was committed. Can it be said that Powers had an impartial trial when the Judge, the Public Prosecutor, the Sheriff, and two-thirds of the jury were his political enemies, and when the whole atmosphere of the Courtroom was hot with political passion? The fact that the one Republican juror and the three Jurors who were John Young Brown Democrats last year concurred in the verdict, and did so without any long discussion in the jury room, should have the weight that justly belongs to it, but the other fact that the eight Goebellite Jurors were equally ready to send Powers to state's prison instead of the gallows, should not be overlooked. It would seem to indicate a lurking doubt in the back of their minds.

The chances are, we should say, that Powers won't say out his life sentence. We wish the state of Kentucky a happy New Year, and for the sake of the state of her own making, though, and she must be her own deliverer.
